At first, some states implemented a plan that led to normal constitution for all. In Tennessee, for example, freed citizens from plantations and farms and freed them as slaves to be compensated with land. Another plan was to give freed slaves 40 acres and a mule. But many states rejected such plans and instead opted for a more gradual approach. In 1862, the Emancipation Proclamation was issued, which declared that all slaves in the Confederate States of America were to be freed. However, this only applied to slaves in the Confederate States, not those in the Union. It took until the passage of the 13th Amendment in 1865 to fully abolish slavery throughout the United States.
